

FOR ONE NIGHT, THE WALLS COME DOWN

4th Annual Mental Health Forum Monday, May 4th 7:00 pm

With no warning these loving All-American families faced the test of a lifetime and emerged stronger and closer than ever. For one night, the walls come down as these courageous families share their stories. No parent or teen should miss this fascinating and informative evening.

With Emcee, Stephanie Stahl, CBS 3/Eyewitness News

Jordan Burnham was popular, a star athlete and student. He also secretly battled depression. Jordan miraculously survived jumping from his 9th story bedroom window and speaks openly about his depression, substance use, treatment. Loving and involved parents, Earl and Georgette Burnham recall their journey from discovering Jordan's secret struggle to finding him appropriate help.

Mia Fontaine shares her precarious refuge in the abyss of criminals and heroin addicts, the painful childhood trauma that caused her near self-destruction, and her remarkable, if controversial, process of healing. Claire Fontaine shares a parent's worst nightmare: having to save three-year-old Mia first from an abusive father, then a decade later from Mia, herself dealing with her manipulative, drug-fueled behavior and repeated disappearances. Claire ultimately forced her only child into a harsh-but-loving boot camp school that did save Mia's life.

Dr. Brian Daly of Temple University shares his extensive research and clinical expertise with adolescents and families with problems related to emotions, behavior, and academics.
